Through its range of Corporate Citizenship activities, AIG’s aim is make a collective impact in communities through collaboration with local partners across the globe. The partnership with JCV on this particular program has been in place since 2007 and donations are made based on the number of new “Minna no kenpo” medical insurance contracts AIG General receives. This year’s donation corresponds to the 2017 total number of such contracts and will provide polio vaccines for 45,200 people.

To date, AIG General has donated the equivalent of vaccines for 740,000 children across the globe. Still, in 2018, about 4,000 young lives are lost each day as a result of preventable diseases. Through its ACTIVE CARE strategy, AIG is committed to identifying and reducing risk across society and, as part of this, AIG General will continue its collaboration with JCV to support children, who are the future of our world, and raise awareness about the importance of vaccines and the prevention of infectious diseases.

<About Japan Committee, Vaccines for the World’s Children (JCV)>

JCV is a non-governmental international aid organization focused on providing developing countries with support for vaccine and vaccine supplies, in addition to carrying out public education activities regarding the prevention of infectious diseases. In many developing countries, children are losing their lives to infectious diseases because they are unable to receive vaccinations.
